MISCELLANEOUS READING. AN AFFECTIONATE BUT OVER-ANXIOUS

HUSBAND. The Detroit paper tells a very good story of a gentleman who lives in that city, and who is the possessor of an amiable wife. He had the misfortune a short time since to see her prostrated on a bed of sickness, which, as appearances indicated, was about to make an end of her. He was excessively grieved at the prospect, and out of pure desire to be employed in some labor of love as an earnest of his affection, he posted off to the cemetery and set the mechanics and nursery men at work, and presently had so charming a nook fitted up that it would have been a pleasure to any sensible person to be buried in it. Not so with the lady, however, and before the roses budded which were to have waved over the grave, the lillies had departed from her cheek. The husband, a little abashed at his over-tem pered zeal, said not a word about the lot in the cemetery, but by some means she heard

It is not pleasant to have such close reminders of one's future existence, and the lady felt not a little vexed at the extensive preparations which her beloved had made to get her under ground. She strictly followed his example, and kept her own counsel, but by way of retaliation, posted off to the jewelers, and ordered an elegant silver coffin plate on which she inscribed the name of her husband, and an appropriate epitaph, leaving blanks for his age and date of death. This the astonished benedict found on his bureau one morning when he got up. He saw the joke at the same time that he heard the suppressed laugh of the spouse from under the bed clothes. The plate is now stowed away in the lady's writing-desk, as a standing offset to the flowery nook in the old ceme-

THE WITCHERY OF LOVE.

A student turns out from college with honors on his head, his mind replete with learning, and not a stir in his affections, excepting for his kindred. A damsel passes his track and takes his heart along with her, and ten to one that she does not leave her own behind her. How is this phenomenon to be accounted for? A transcendentalist walks out from his library, stock full of the deep-est metaphysics. He finds on his way a little satin shoe of the nicest shape, and before he has time to count ten, some bright-eyed creature whom he never saw before takes complete possession of his soul. To what shall we attribute this witchery? A miser of sixty years, and several millions sterling, who never did a generous act, sees a blue ribbon neatly fastened with a common brass pin around the waist of a girl not worth a sixpence, and before three days he makes her mistress of all his wealth, and turns out to be a happy, jovial person. Who can give a logical history of this proceeding? A stern warrior, wedded to nothing but strict disci-A NOTHER ARRIVAL.—BRYAN & ADAMS have again returned from New York with a choice lot of LADIES' DRESS GOODS. They a ball-room in a foreign clime, where he a ball-room in a foreign clime, where he meets a Spanish girl of sixteen, who takes away his old, stout, honest heart, with a simple twirl of her fan. Can we get a mathematical demonstration of the manœuvering by which this conquest was effected?
